Residents of Purasawalkam are a happy lot as their long pending civic grievances at Brick Kiln Road including water stagnation due to leakage in sewage and metro water pipes and deteriorated roads were cleared on Saturday following a report in Deccan Chronicle.

The road got a tar paint after the metro water officials repaired leaked pipe lines. Assistant engineer of metro water, Purasawalkam said, "As both metro water and sewage pipelines were damaged following the set up of storm water drains six months ago, it took a while to identify the damage and work on it."

said the move brings relief to 450 odd families and thousands of regular road users.

"The locality becomes an ideal destination if other issues like haphazard parking, encroachments and lack of streetlights are taken up," said president of the association Gurmeet Singh.
